Being copyright compliant is a challenging issue for corporate organisations. National and international regulations very often focus on public and academic needs. The needs of private industry are not taken into consideration.

Our copyright training is built as workshops with a theoretical and practical part to help users understand the basics of copyright, the need for compliance and where to find information on usage for various purposes. The training offers room for user specific questions and can be customised to the needs of any corporation.

Barbara Reißland

(LIBRARY CONSULT) has worked for 12 years in information management departments of the pharmaceutical industry.

As a global copyright expert she has developed e-learning training and implemented various tools and systems for copyright compliant document and information management.

Modules

1 – The basics of copyright

What is copyright? Which rights are granted to the author? What happens during a publishing process? What are the differences in international copyright?

2 – Refresher

This course picks up on the basics of copyright, covering issues such as sharing published material in a corporate environment; sharing copyright covered material outside the corporation; using copyright covered material in regulatory affairs.

3 – Experts

This course is designed for information professionals, librarians and everyone having to do with copyright by nature of their work (eg. patent lawyers or documentalists) and aims to help build a knowledge base for everyday questions from the users.

Christine Eckenweber-Black
